COMFORT & RENEW

Camp New Ground starts second year

Camp New Ground — a Lutheran camp program for children dealing with the changed world we now live in — is off to a second great year, with more than 20 churches already signing up as host sites throughout the New York metropolitan area and New Jersey.

With continuing support of LDR through LDRNY, the New Ground Day Camps will run for one — and two-week sessions during July and August. Again this year, LDRNY is assisting the efforts of Koinonia, an outdoor ministry of the Lutheran Church, with mental health counseling provided by the Lutheran Counseling Center (LCC).

Churches and schools are now registering for summer 2003. In addition, Our Saviour, Jamaica, hosts kids on Saturdays in May.

This year, the curriculum is entitled "Spiritlife," and is intended to help children recognize and experience the guiding presence of the Holy Spirit in their lives, according to Pr. Ann Tiemeyer, director of Koinonia NYC. Pr. Tiemeyer was camp director last year, and this year she accepted a new position to get Koinonia's New York outreach off the ground.

All New Ground Camps are staffed with a team of counselors, teachers, and the mental health advisors in residence from LCC. Everyone works together in every aspect of the program so that the approach is both rich and genuinely spiritual.

If your church or school wants to host a camp, phone Pr. Tiemeyer at (917) 923-9520 (amtiemeyer@aol.com) or Koinonia at (800) 980-2267. Counselors and mental health professionals are also needed. For more information, check out the website at www.LDRNY.org, and click on the "Assistance" button and "Camps."

Common sense and communication

By Dr. John J. Scibilia, Executive Director

LDRNY is committed to providing assistance and available resources to congregations, leaders and caregivers in preparing for disaster as well as responding to disaster throughout the long-term recovery. Whether preparing for a disaster that is natural or human-caused, it doesn't take a great deal of energy and time to prepare. The time spent now will really be important to your community in many emergency situations — it really is just a matter of deciding this is important and just doing it.

With the heightened state of terror alert in the country, especially in the New York area, please be assured that Lutheran Disaster Response of New York is working closely with city and regional Offices of Emergency Management, FEMA, the American Red Cross and other key disaster-related agencies. I'm in regular contact with emergency and response agency officials. Maintaining open and accessible lines of communication is of vital importance in emergency preparedness and response. The other is common sense. What was a good idea on September 10, 2001, is still a good idea today. Having a home kit containing food, water, first-aid supplies and other essentials has always been a great idea. There is great work being done behind the scenes to make the greater New York area as safe as possible.

Does your congregation have a disaster plan? Did you know, for example, an air transportation disaster occurs in the greater New York area on the average of every 18 months? This winter was also a good reminder about how weather can cause a burden and even pose danger to some. Natural disasters such as flooding and ice storms, with possible resulting loss of power and other side effects, can deeply affect the homebound and elderly. Your congregation can reach out to the most vulnerable members of the congregation and residents of the neighborhood. Communication plans within the congregation as well as special outreach plans to those most at risk is a great first step.

Your local American Red Cross chapter has a variety of resources and programs that can be helpful to the congregation and its members. The following resources are also available for congregations:

- Prepared to Care (available by contacting LDRNY by email or phone)
- And Preparing for Disaster – A Guide for Lutheran Congregations (Download this document at www.LDRNY.org, click on the "How I Can Help" button and navigate to the Self-Help page, or contact LDRNY by email, HELP@LDRNY.org, 1-866-864-1600.)

LDRNY rallies for more help for victims

LDRNY Executive Director Dr. John J. Scibilia, center, spoke recently at a news conference at City Hall in Manhattan. Scibilia was part of a group of speakers who lobbied FEMA to extend assistance to people affected by 9/11. The deadline for applying for assistance was Jan. 31, 2003. For more information on this story, check our website, www.LDRNY.org, and click on the "Press Room" button.

Your donations help feed the hungry

To help those caught in the aftershocks of 9/11, Lutheran Disaster Response of New York has already distributed more than $220,000 in food vouchers and emergency cash assistance to families and food programs that are sponsored by or associated with Lutheran ministries.

“New York had a hunger problem before 9/11, the aftershocks of this disaster have strained the resources of the city’s food programs,” said Executive Director John Scibilia.

Of the $220,000, LDRNY has dispensed $125,000 in food vouchers to families and individuals who are clients of Project LIFE (Lutheran Initiative for Empowerment), the disaster response case management program supported by LDRNY and operated by Lutheran Social Services – Metropolitan New York. Another $30,000 in food vouchers were given to clients with unmet needs.

More than $70,000 has also been granted by LDRNY to several food programs throughout the metropolitan area, that are run by or in concert with Lutheran churches. Some of these programs include Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church, Manhattan; Lutheran Family and Children’s Services, Long Island; Jewish Services Coalition/Far Rockaway Food Pantry; Our Lady of Lourdes Outreach Food Pantry; St. Luke’s Lutheran Church, Fordham Lutheran, and Master’s Helping Hand Food Pantry in New Rochelle.

“After visiting these pantries and soup kitchens, the significance of this program became even more defined,” said Jennifer Singer, LDRNY coordinator, who Scibilia appointed as the food program liaison. “A majority of people being served through these programs are suffering from the trickle-down effect of September 11th. Due to many high-level job cuts, housecleaners, livery drivers and babysitters are out of work, too. Their employers lost their sources of income and could no longer afford such luxuries. Many of these people who lost their jobs were already among the working poor and some undocumented ... completely left out of the system as if they did not exist.”

In addition, LDRNY recently met directly with City Harvest, a hunger response program in New York. “This $220,000 for individuals and food programs is just the beginning, and yet it has already touched many who have been affected by the tragedy of 9/11. A significant number remain hungry, but not forgotten,” said Scibilia.

If you’d like to make a donation to the LDRNY food program, send your check to LDRNY, 475 Riverside Dr. #1620, New York, NY 10115.

If a church needs more information about receiving support, check the website www.LDRNY.org for details on applying for assistance.

New Life Center a fast success

The New Life Center, which opened last December with support from Lutheran Disaster Response of New York, to provide aid to a part of the Chinese community affected by 9/11, has already helped more people than it ever anticipated.

Located at the True Light Lutheran Church (LCMS) in Chinatown, the Center strives to serve the needs of the Fujianese community, an ethnic group from the Fujian Province of China. Many lost their livelihood and could not qualify for emergency assistance because they fell outside the strict geographical guidelines of many disaster-response agencies.

According to Chris Connell, director of Lutheran Social Services-Metropolitan New York (LSS-MNY) Disaster Relief, the Fujianese “are some of the most underserved people, especially in regard to Sept. 11. Compound the problem, language assistance is only available in Cantonese and Chinese, leaving the Fujianese population without adequate translation and disaster support services,” she said.

“We projected working with 100 families in the first year,” said Henry Ye, director of the Asia Minor Program, LSS-MNY. The center was established by LSS-MNY and LDRNY.

“Lutheran Disaster Response of New York has impacted a lot of family lives,” Ye said, “People are getting help. LDRNY has eased some of the pain of this community.”

Services offered at New Life Center include an after-school program for Fujianese children, counseling services for individuals and families, pro-bono attorney consultations, emergency assistance, health education and English-as-a-second-language courses. “We need only a little flour to make a lot of bread for the people,” Ye said. Wendy Wang is director for the New Life Center, which is staffed with care managers who speak Fujianese. Wang is Fujianese.

“Since Dec. 12 we’ve already worked with 85 families,” Wang said. “We see ourselves as a bridge to serve an underserved community. People trust a church-based agency,” she said.

LDRNY names Pr. Tom Taylor as L.I. deputy

has enhanced its presence, programs and services on Long Island.

The Rev. Tom Taylor, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, North Bellmore, deputy chief and chaplain of the North Bellmore Fire Department, and a chaplain for the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner, New York City, has been named deputy coordinator for LDRNY's Long Island outreach. Taylor, a Red Cross chaplain during the Ground Zero recovery efforts, was instrumental in helping LDRNY develop and deliver many of its disaster response programs.

"As more Long Islanders come to grips with the affects of September 11, it is important for LDRNY to enhance our presence among these hidden victims," said Dr. John J. Scibilia, executive director of LDRNY. One of Taylor's first roles will be to coordinate the involvement of LDRNY, its partner agencies and congregations with the Long Island VOAD (Voluntary Agencies Active in Disaster). LIVOAD convenes all of the programs and agencies that respond to disaster. Taylor will be the primary point of contact with the Office of Emergency Management in both Nassau and Suffolk counties.

Scibilia is coordinating LDRNY's efforts with the Unmet Needs Roundtable of Long Island, an ad hoc group being brought together by the Health and Welfare Council of Long Island to address the needs of those affected by 9/11 with agencies, organizations and individuals that can provide financial assistance.

The Unmet Needs Roundtable of Long Island is modeled after the same group in New York City, which was developed last year as a response to victims of 9/11 who didn't meet the strict guidelines for federal assistance programs, or who fell through the cracks of the public assistance system. Agencies associated with the Roundtable include Children's Aid Society, Puerto Rican Legal Defense Fund and Brooklyn Bureau of Community Services. The Roundtable was initiated by LDRNY and its partner, Lutheran Social Services-Metropolitan New York.

In the past year, more than 200 people affected by 9/11 in New York City have been helped with more than $300,000 for mortgage or rental assistance, food or to purchase special equipment for their homes, according to Taylor.

"The Unmet Needs Roundtable of Long Island hopes to bring this same level of assistance to those in the breach in Long Island," said Scibilia. Scibilia expects the Unmet Needs Roundtable's work to be even more significant now that other means of federal assistance is over.

"Pr. Tom Taylor is an especially good fit for this new role," said Scibilia, "since he lives and leads a congregation on Long Island and truly understands the needs of its residents."

In addition to leading the congregation of Grace Lutheran Church in North Bellmore, Taylor is chaplain of the North Bellmore Fire Department, an EMT-D and team leader for the Nassau County Fire Commission Critical Incident Stress Management Team. He also served as chaplain of the Liberty Fire Department, Liberty, N.Y., where he was a fire investigator. His military service included chaplaincy in the United States Naval Reserves.

He is certified by the American Academy of Experts in Traumatic Stress and also serves with the Congregational Resource Center in helping congregations in transition, conflict or mission development.

Lutherans continue to help hidden victims

LDRNY and our faith community partners carry an increasingly larger role in the long-term recovery efforts, meeting unmet economic needs of those affected by 9/11 and its wave effects. FEMA programs and disaster unemployment assistance are now coming to an end. In addition, the Red Cross and Salvation Army are no longer providing any cash assistance.

LDRNY's Project Life, a joint care management program with Lutheran Social Services Metropolitan New York, is a lifeline to the hidden victims. Here are a few of the stories of those we've helped:

Elizabeth:

Elizabeth is an immigrant from Ghana, West Africa, who worked as a cleaning lady at Windows on the World at the World Trade Center. She is also an undocumented immigrant. Even though Elizabeth was miles away from the Trade Center at her home in the Bronx when the 9/11 tragedy struck, her life was turned upside-down. She lost her job, was ineligible for unemployment due to her immigration status, and faced a formidable challenge in finding another job.

A Project Life care manager assisted her in accessing charitable assistance designed to help undocumented workers laid off due to 9/11, and provided much-needed financial help for rent, telephone bills, and utilities. Project Life also referred her to free health insurance available through the September 11th Fund, and to the Restaurant Opportunities Center of New York (ROC-NY), a non-profit information clearinghouse for restaurant staff from downtown laid off in the wake of 9/11. ROC provided a valuable support group and information source for Elizabeth during this trying period.

Finally, through a referral from a Lutheran pastor in the Bronx, Elizabeth was able to connect with an immigration organization which helped her file an application to obtain a legal work authorization and green card. Once she obtains her work authorization, Elizabeth plans on taking advantage of a pro bono September 11th Fund job training and education program to expand her job skills and employability.

Teresa:

Teresa, an emigrant to the United States from Peru, lost her husband, Miguel, on September 11th, 2002. He was killed while working maintenance on the 92nd floor of the north tower. Teresa was a mother of two grown children and had been a stay-at-home mother all her life. Her English was extremely limited and posed a great challenge to accessing the assistance to which she was entitled.

Teresa was assisted by a Spanish-language care manager at Project Life. Project Life assisted her with the complex, lengthy, and English-language application to the Federal Emergency Management Agency's Mortgage and Rental Assistance Program (FEMA MRA). As a result, Teresa's rent on her Jackson Heights, Queens, apartment was taken care of in the difficult months following 9/11. Project Life also assisted her in accessing assistance from the Good Samaritan Fund, the New York State Crime Victim's Board, and other agencies, in addition to providing her with some financial help of her own.

In November 2002, Teresa attended Project Life's Thanksgiving dinner, which fed more than 200 of its clients at a restaurant in Manhattan. As a result of Project Life's help, Teresa's life is much more stable now than it was in the harrowing days following 9/11. Through a referral from Project Life, Teresa will be able to access free English as a Second Language classes available through the September 11th Fund, and hopes to make the transition to working herself someday soon.

Lutherans provide a nice Christmas

Children at two churches in the South Bronx were provided with a nice Christmas, thanks to donations received from our generous supporters of LDRNY. "Thanks to your generosity, we were able to experience the satisfaction of witnessing not only the joy of celebrating the birth of Christ, but also the joy of seeing the faces that these 56 children demonstrated when they received their gifts," wrote Pr. Michael Thomas of New Hope for All Saints Lutheran Church in the South Bronx.

Thank You, LDRNY

Note to Ann Mahoney, Unmet Needs Roundtable Coordinator

"Just wanted to be able to say 'thank you' for the wonderful work and kindness shown towards us, but more importantly towards the clients that are presented. You have made a difference in the lives of so many and it is truly appreciated."

— Proyecto Ayuda (Carmen Calderon, Jackson Chin, Violeta Talavera, Richard Borg and the staff)

Notes to Dr. John J. Scibilia, Executive Director

"Thank you and your staff for the fundraising efforts to our Hunger Prevention Program. This donation was distributed to three of our sites: Mt. Paran Baptist Church, Trinity Lutheran Church, Manhattan; and St. Stephen's Meals at Epiphany Lutheran Church. These funds raised by LDRNY provided additional support for the missions of our three sites during the Thanksgiving holiday. St. Stephen's Meals served about 70 individuals, Mt. Paran provided 40 meals and Trinity's Annual Community Dinner served more than 300 sit-down dinners and 250 take-out meals."

— Sacajawea Hall, Lutheran Social Services, Hunger Prevention Program coordinator

"I pray for your ministry everyday that LDRNY's continuing service and compassion will enable 9/11 victims to persevere with healing and hope."

— John Sims, LDR Tennessee coordinator

"A quick note to say 'thank you' for organizing and hosting last night's wonderful networking event for Voluntary Agencies Active in Disaster. LDRNY continues to demonstrate its remarkable value to the disaster community. Your impact in the disaster recovery has been remarkable. You have run circles around agencies that are much larger and better established."

— Christopher Toward, managing director Philanthropy Squared

"The most recent edition of Comfort & Renew spoke powerfully and eloquently about the ongoing needs. It makes me terribly sad, and yes, I admit it, also angry, that in this country and city where those who have little or nothing are surrounded by others who have abundance but who do not share their gifts from God. There are many who go without basic necessities, like food."

— Rose Ann Foege, New Rochelle

LDRNY funds clergy support programs

Attention ELCA pastors of the Metropolitan New York Synod!

Save Oct. 20-23 as the dates for a comfort and renewal retreat, sponsored, in part, by Lutheran Disaster Response of New York.

"Emotional, Physical and Spiritual Resources for Stressful Times," will take place at St. Ignatius Retreat House in Manhasset, N.Y., according to Pr. Tom Taylor, LDRNY deputy coordinator for Long Island who is organizing the retreat.

With an exciting list of speakers and topics, the retreat promises to renew you physically, emotionally and spiritually. Watch for more information in your mailbox.

This is just the latest program in LDRNY's efforts to support clergy. In March, the Lutheran Counseling Center (LCC) announced an LDRNY-funded comprehensive wellness program for pastors. LDRNY Executive Director John Scibilia says that studies of the aftermath of natural and human catastrophes show that many caregivers, especially pastors, leave their communities or the ministry following a disaster, due in large part, to compassion fatigue.

LCC's new pastoral health and wellness program offers pastors tools to create personal health and wellness, through professional support, small groups of colleagues working together, educational forums, interactive web site consultation, and much more.

For more information, call LCC at 516-741-0994, or send an email to mollyblcc@aol.com (Molly). For information about clergy respite programs in general, call Cherylne Beck at the Metropolitan New York Synod, or Carol Mittlestadt for the Atlantic District.

Disaster News From Around the World

Lutheran Disaster Response, a ministry of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) and Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, helped residents of Guam recover after Typhoon Pongsona struck the island in December

Lutheran Disaster Response provided a $10,000 grant to support Church World Service typhoon recovery efforts on Guam. "This is the second major typhoon this island of 150,000 people suffered in the last five months," said the Rev. Gilbert B. Furst, director, Lutheran Disaster Response.

"According to preliminary estimates, more than 2,000 homes were destroyed as the typhoon tore across the island with up to 180 mile-per-hour winds," said Furst. More than 3,200 people were housed in emergency shelters located at public schools, Furst said.

Comfort & Renew Grants

- Ashirwad After School Program at Ashirwad Lutheran Ministry was funded by Lutheran Disaster Response of New York.
- The Healing Music Ministry program continues at St. Jacobi Lutheran Church in Brooklyn. The church has completed more than a dozen monthly concerts, including a performance by the Wagner College Choir, to help bring some peace and comfort to the community after 9/11. Congratulations to Music Ministry Coordinator Marion Palm for this wonderful program.
- Comfort and Renew Grants of up to $15,000 are still available to ministries, schools and churches that start programs to provide comfort and support to people affected by 9/11 and its wave effects. To apply for a grant, check the website, www.LDRNY.org and click on the "Comfort & Renew" button.

LDRNY wants to hear from you. If you have a good story to tell about your grant program, send a note to Wendy@LDRNY.org.

Your gifts at work

Through your generosity, Lutheran Disaster Response of New York can provide funding and support for programs that assist people affected by Sept. 11.

Programs include:

• Comfort and Renew Grant Program for congregations and grass roots ministries. Grants of up to $15,000, mostly provided by AAL/LB, are available to establish a program that will provide comfort and renewal to people affected by Sept. 11 and its wave effects. For information, contact for the LCMS: Kathy Jagow, Atlantic District, 914-337-5700, ext. 6, ad_kj@concordia-ny.edu; for ELCA: Connie Duever, cduever@mny.org, 212-665-0732.

• Food Programs. Emergency cash assistance is available to soup kitchens, food pantries and programs run by Lutheran churches or organizations, or operated in conjunction with community efforts, to help meet increased demand following 9/11. For more information, or to apply, contact Jennifer@LDRNY.org (1-866-864-1600).

• Project LIFE (Lutheran Initiative for Empowerment). A "care" management program coordinated by Lutheran Social Services -Metro New York to help victims of Sept. 11 access the myriad of help and benefits available to them, as well as connect them to the right public assistance. Call 1-800-729-9209.

• Tuition assistance program for Lutheran Schools and Early Childhood Education Programs. Tuition assistance is available to any child attending a Lutheran School who was affected by Sept. 11. Call Lutheran Schools Association at 212-665-5599.

• New Ground, a camp for New York Neighborhoods, administered by Koinonia. Call 800-980-2267, email koinoniaNY@yahoo.com.

Counseling available 24/7 for troubling times

As the war in Iraq grew closer and the national security alert moved higher for a terrorist attack, LDRNY and its partners ramped up with extra services and support.

Counseling services from Lutheran Counseling Center, an LDRNY partner, were made available round the clock. If you feel like you need to talk to someone, call LCC's 24/7 counseling line at 1-800-317-1173.

LDRNY wants to be sure that everyone who needs to talk to someone regarding the wave effects of Sept. 11, war or the threat of terrorist attacks, has access to counseling. Whether you're a pastor in a church in the greater Metropolitan New York area, a church member, a parent or a student, we're here for you. This can be a very fearful and unsettling time for many of us, especially those with loved ones or friends in the military. You may also visit the Center's website at www.lcc132.org.

Please be assured that all of our Lutheran schools are well prepared with safety plans. If you need more information, or have a concern about your students, please feel free to contact Marlene Lund, Lutheran Schools Director at marlenelund@mindspring.com, or call 212-665-0732, ext. 225.

Lund suggests a good website that offers tips for talking to your children about disaster and violence, www.ncccv.org.
